SocioAfrica Proposes the “United States of Africa” — A Bold Vision to End Corruption, Remove Bad Leaders & Rebuild a New Africa

Abuja, Nigeria — SocioAfrica has announced a historic proposal to transform the African continent into a unified federation — the “United States of Africa.”

The proposal envisions a new Africa where leadership is based on integrity, transparency, and merit; where corruption is eradicated, and where every nation contributes to a shared future of peace, innovation, and prosperity.

SocioAfrica believes that the time has come for true continental unity — one not limited by borders, politics, or colonial systems — but grounded in the principles of justice, equality, and love for humanity.

“Africa’s future cannot continue to be determined by corrupt elites or external powers. We are calling for a rebirth — a new Africa led by the people, powered by technology, and guided by truth,” said Oluwaseun Medayedupin, Founder of SocioAfrica.

According to Medayedupin, the United States of Africa proposal includes the creation of a unified digital governance system — a model where AI and transparent data tools oversee leadership integrity, elections, and public accountability.

The plan also aims to:

- Establish a continental constitution focused on unity and shared progress.
- Promote pan-African trade and innovation through a single digital economy.
- Chase away corrupt and unqualified leaders, giving power back to the people.
- Strengthen ties between Africa and global partners on fair, respectful terms.

This movement, backed by SocioAsia and various youth-led networks, invites African leaders, activists, and citizens worldwide to join in crafting the foundation for a new, united, corruption-free Africa.
